REPORT TO THE EVENING WORLD BY DIRECT WIRE
FROM CONVENTION HALL.

When the second session of the Democratic Convention was called to order by Chairman Owens the vast auditorium of the Wigwam presented a scene of far greater activity and animation than at the opening of the proceedings yesterday. The audience was larger by several thousand and only a few rows of vacant seats in the rear of the galleries were left at 10.45. These were rapidly filled up although scarcely a hundred of the delegates had arrived at the hall at that hour.

The air was comparatively cool, and it was noticeable that fans and handkerchiefs played a far less conspicuous part in the proceedings than in yesterday's session. A refreshing breeze from the lake entered through the roof windows and wafted across the galleries and was perceptible even on the floor.

The crowd was an extremely good-natured one, but not particularly demonstrative. While waiting for the delegates to assemble the band in the gallery behind the Chairman's platform kept up a succession of lively airs, and this served to keep every one in a good humor. There was occasional applause from the spectators upon the arrival of some distinguished persons. It was evident the crowd was only anxious for the convention to settle down to work, and was waiting eagerly for the scene of the day to begin.

The Chairman's desk was ornamented with two vases of cut flowers, and there was another notable improvement—the removal of all the banners bearing the State names and designating the different delegations in the hall. The view from every part of the Wigwam was in consequence less obstructed.

Committees Still at Work.
The four committees continued in secret session up to the time of the opening of the convention, and nothing could be learned prior to their adjournment of the action which they had taken. The greatest interest centered upon the Committee on Rules, and the report which they are to present is expected to cause the first division of sentiment among the delegates.

The Committees on Resolutions and Credentials also had much work before them and were in continuous session from 9 o'clock this morning.

The first general outburst of applause was heard when just before 11 o'clock the New York delegates came in and took their seats in the center of the hall. Edward Murphy and Gov. Flower walked down the middle aisle, followed by Richard Croker, Gen. Slocum, Mayor Grant and Gen. Slocum, while the rest of the delegation crowded down behind them.

The leaders were immediately surrounded by delegates from other States who are supposed to be in the combination which is to attempt to defeat Cleveland, and an earnest conference ensued.

GEN. ADLAI STEVENSON.

In honor of the arrival of the New York crowd the band struck up "Boon-ta-ra," and this brought out more applause from the Tammany ranks in the rear of the hall.

The Session Opened.
The rest of the delegates were not long in arriving, and the seats on the main floor were soon filled. There was a long delay, however, after they had all come in, and it was not until 11.30 that Chairman Owens finally rapped for order and the exercises opened with prayer by Rev. Alfred H. Henry.

Some of the spectators to the left thought that a speech was being made and shouted out to the clergyman to speak louder. This temporarily interrupted the religious exercises.

The call for the reports of the regular committees was interrupted by Delegate Delaney, of Alaska, who had a memorial from the people of that Territory to the convention which he wished to present. He sent up a blue paper document, which was referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

"The next order of business," said Chairman Owens, "is the report of the Committee on Credentials," but the Chairman, Mr. Lamb, of Indiana, said the report would not be ready until 11 o'clock. Somebody in the rear of the hall began calling for Senator Mills, who sat with the Texas delegation.

The Tammany contingent present thought it was Hill's name which had been mentioned, and rose up in a body and yelled for the New York Senator. Delegates got up in their seats and looked around as if expecting to see Senator Hill in the hall, and people in the galleries all got the impression that he was present.

The calling was kept up for several minutes, and when order was finally restored a delegate from Missouri rose and stated that it was Senator Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, whom he had called for, and asked that he be requested to address the convention.

Senator Mills Taken Sick.
Mr. Mills declined, however, to accede to this request on the score of ill-health, and some of the crowd happened to catch a glimpse of him. Palmer, who was taking his seat in the gallery set apart for the distinguished guests, set up a cry for him.

After several minutes cheering and calling on him the Chairman at last requested him to address the convention, and he complied.

When the venerable statesman reached the platform he was greeted with another shout. Then, after a few moments' hesitation, he addressed the assembly with a story of his last campaign in Illinois, told them that the Democratic party was approaching a crucial contest, the most important in twenty-five years, and it was necessary that the work of this convention should be carefully and thoroughly done.

He appealed to the delegates to work together harmoniously, and said that it was only by harmony and unity of action that the party could gain the victory next November which seemed now in its grasp. Gen. Palmer denounced McKinleyism, and closed with an eloquent appeal for harmonious action.

As soon as the applause which greeted Gen. Palmer's speech had died out a gentleman from Ohio rose, and amid great applause, called on Col. John R. Fellows, of New York, to address the convention.

The motion was put, and a good many dissenting voices were heard, but the Chairman declared that it was carried, and Col. Fellows was requested to make a speech. He rose in his seat, refusing to take the platform, and excused himself on the ground that, as a delegate, he could not properly take up the time of the convention then. Later on, he said, when delegates would be called upon to express their opinions, he would have something to say.

Report on Credentials.
Chairman Lamb, of the Committee on Credentials, got a chance to make his report, which was very brief. The regular delegates from Alabama, Arizona, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Utah and the District of Columbia recommended by the National Committee were seated.

The announcement that the contesting

New York delegation had withdrawn its credentials, but had been given seats on the floor, was received with applause.

The Committee on Credentials said that they regarded all the Syracuse delegates as good Democrats. The report was accepted unanimously.

Then came the report of the Committee of Permanent Organization, and the announcement that Mr. Wm. L. Wilson, of Virginia, had been selected as Permanent Chairman of the convention was received with loud applause. On motion of Don M. Dickinson, a committee of five was appointed to escort Mr. Wilson to the chair. Meantime the band began to play patriotic airs, which were greeted with cheering.

The shouting, however, was most enthusiastic when the strains of "Dixie" floated down from the gallery. The Southern delegates stood up in their chairs and shouted themselves hoarse, waving their hats, while their noise nearly drowned that of the band.

Another Rainstorm.
In all this hilarity a sudden darkness came over the scene and there was a repetition of yesterday's deluge. Thanks to the work of the roofers, the leaky places had been stopped up and there was no general shower-bath, such as the audience received yesterday.

GEN. DANIEL W. HICKLES.

The falling rain had a roaring sound on the roof, and for several minutes it was so dark that there were loud calls for lights.

The shower was of brief duration, but while it lasted the band got in its work effectively and there was no alarm manifested.

At this time there was not a seat unoccupied in the entire auditorium, and an up-broken sea of faces stretched out to the walls in every direction.

Behind the last row all the available standing space was occupied, though the aisles were all kept clear.

Chairman Wilson was led to the platform by Don M. Dickinson and Col. Fellows, who grasped his arm on each side, and was followed by cheers as he went down the aisle.

Chairman Wilson's Speech.
Congressman Wilson, on taking the Chair, said:
GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: This convention has a high and patriotic work to perform. We owe much to our party; we owe much to our country. We are here to decide the fate of our party, and we are here to decide the fate of our country. We are here to decide the fate of our party, and we are here to decide the fate of our country.

Never was this truth brought home to us more than at this moment. We are here to decide the fate of our party, and we are here to decide the fate of our country. We are here to decide the fate of our party, and we are here to decide the fate of our country.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

Free government is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand. It is the only government that can stand.

are proportioned to the ability and duty of the taxpayer rather than to his ignorance, his weakness and his patience.

When the tax is just, the taxpayer is not a taxpayer. When the tax is just, the taxpayer is not a taxpayer. When the tax is just, the taxpayer is not a taxpayer.

GEN. HENRY W. SLOCUM.

Instruments for its development, we stand disgraced in the eyes of mankind if we call it and if we do not support our own government. We can throw that support on our people only by beggary or by force. If we do the one we are a conquered nation; if we do the other we are a pirate nation.

The Democratic party does not intend that we should be either. It means to do it. It means to do it. It means to do it. It means to do it. It means to do it.

But, gentlemen, we are confronted with a new cry in this campaign. The Republican party, says Gov. McKinley, is for the people. We are for the people. We are for the people. We are for the people. We are for the people.

It is not reciprocity at all. It is retaliation, and worst of all, retaliation on our own people. It is retaliation on our own people. It is retaliation on our own people. It is retaliation on our own people. It is retaliation on our own people.

The weather was close and sultry inside the course, for though a strong breeze was blowing it came from the wrong direction and backed up against the grand stand. The track was all that could be desired.

The opening dash was over the Futurity course, about five and a half furlongs. Kingston, notwithstanding he carried 131 pounds, was made a prohibitive favorite at odds on, Orrie, Fremont and Tringle were all backed for the place. Kingston won easily from Orrie, while Tringle landed third.

With the horses were the choices in the second race, and both were well backed. Loveland had strong support. Extra was quietly played around the ring for a good thing, and he landed the money by a head from Loveland. The race was a very close one, but Extra was as usual by laying out Orrie and getting pocketed in the stretch. Highway was this time a head in front of Waraw.

Tringle and Orrie made the running in the third race. Loveland was played heavily from 6 to 2 down to 7 to 1. Zorling, who was even favored by the public, was backed up to 4 to 1. Loveland looked all over a winner fifty yards from home, but Zorling came with a great burst and won by a head. Highway was a head in front of Loveland. Highway was a head in front of Loveland.

The Sheepshead Jockey Club's programme to-day was very attractive, and was the means of drawing a crowd of 10,000 people to the track. Probably the advertised appearance of Potomac had a great deal to do with it, for this great colt has not been seen since last year, when he was retired, apparently broken down forever. To-day he was announced to run in the fifth race, a handicap sweepstakes, with Rex, Crackman, King Crab, his highness and others as competitors.
